According to their statements both of the Elliotts did some shooting, but claim that Osborue shot first.

The story of the shooting, as related by Gus and Shede Johns, eye-witnesses, is that A. C. Osborne was standing in front of Schrader's talking to Frank Clarks, an attorney, when the Elliotts appeared, walking south on High street. The two men walked up close to where Osborne was standing and one of the Elhotts remarked: "Give it to the aof a b-." whereup in one of them fired at Caborne, who started to back towards the north. He pailed a pistol and began dring at the two Elliotts, who were fol-lewing him with revolvers in hand shooting at him. They were firing to the north, while Osborne fired south. As the latter neared McDonald's har store he opened the door and ran in Patrick Edilott in close pursuit, shooting at him. Patrotham Dan McManamy caught Col. W. J. Elliott and took the revolver away from him. When the police entered the hat store they found Osborne lying dead on the floor and Patrick Elliott standing over him with a revolver still smoking in his hand.

Three revolvers have been found, but Osborne's is not among them. Two of them belong to the Elliotts, and are nearly empty of loads. The police are anxious to find the owner of the third. givery chamber is leaded, and the police believe it was held by some fourth party, yet unknown. There were all quisin-A Len Proctical Higgs.

ART OF VENTRILOQUISM.

SAYS IT IS NOT A GIFT.

Ventriloquism is without doubt an ancient art, one which was and is at the present time surrainded by a halo of mystery. It is remerkable that in this advanced age so reach doubt and misconception prevail respecting ventrilequistre. This is due in a great measure to the fact that the happy possessors of the grit are inclined to retain the secrets for their own profit, and so prevent a host of competitors from taking the field. Ventriloom-m is not a rife: it depends ity of the student as to whether he will succeed in making a mark or not, but it is nevertheless true that any one possessing a certain amount of perseverance an exponent of the fascinating art, causing their friends to wonder at the number of voices within them. Those so enment or aunoyance to their fellows, but

The writer has been asked on numerthat it would appear to proceed from his own pocket or some other equally absurd

Now as to the meaning of the word ventriloquism. It is derived from the a misnomer, and leads many people to imagine that the voices are produced from that portion of the body. That is not so, the ventriloquial voice being formed purely and simply in the throat, the muscles of the stomach only being requisite to give sufficient strength or power to the voice. Ventriloquism may be classed under three heads: Ventriloquism proper, collequism and polyphonism. Under the first of these heads comes the distant voice: that is, imitation of sounds as they appear when heard from a distance and in various places and directions. The "man-un-the-chimney, on-the-roof and down-the-cellar" illusions, which nearly every one has had an opportunity of hearing, are the outcomes of this voice. Again, there are the "street crass," in which the performer has a miniature drawing room window, and gives imitations of varied and hu morous well known street cries, heard first a long way off; then gradually the man is heard coming nearer and nearer. passing the window, and going slowly away again in the distance. The window being made to open and close makes the illusion perfect.

Colloquism consists of the imitations is usual for most ventriloquists to introduce councal, Lie size, talking automata, the performer controls the mouth, eyes, the same time as the words are uttered certainty of the direction from which sounds emanate, and which, by the way, lasions, the voice really appears to proceed from the figures.

Polyphoni-m or mimicry is the imitation of cattle, sheep, sawing, planing, every school can doubtless be found a youth who amuses his fellows in the playground corner with his crowing and

> His Curiosity Was Too Strong. A delightful story of the exhibition in 14 for that." an 8-year-old boy of weak human nature that fails sometimes to be equal to the strain put upon it comes from Brooklyn. This small boy has not the virtue of humility very prominently developed. Indeed, he is what is known among children of his own age as "proud," and dinner was ready. He invited me to sit wont to remind such of his playmates as are less fortunate than he in worldly station of his advantages. Now his mother, who has a class in Sanday school, to which her little son also belongs, had given his outgrown overcoat to another boy in the class. And then, knowing the failing of her offspring, before setting out she told hun he must not tell the new owner that the coat had ever belonged to him. And the boy promised. But it was terribly hard work, especially as he sat next the object exercises. But he didn't say anything, and the mother's heart was easier. At last, however, just before school was over, his state of grace departed from him. Leaning over the other boy, with cautiously extended fingers, he said, "I just want to see if that hole is in that pocket yet."-New York Evening Sun.

The Best Way to Buy Euranus.

The banana, which is the greatest of all tropical fruits, comes to us chiefly from Panama and the West Indies in great shiploads, and in the banana market in New York the big green bunches-"heads" they call them in South America, just as we speak of heads of cabbage-containing from five to ten dozen each, can be bought for a dollar to two dollars and fifty cents, according to the variety. They are not so expensive after all, and a big green bunch hung in a cool cellar will ripen gradually, so as to furnish a doz u of ripe ones each day until the whole bunch is gone. In this way you can enjoy your bananas just as they do in the land of palms, for even there they cut them while they are geeen. and allow them to ripen as we do in the North.-Courtenay de Kalb in Harper's Young People.

A Prophecy. A Pittsburg student, while reading the book of the Vision of Nahum, the Elkashite, came across a pissage that seemed to him to be a prophecy of the discovery of the use of electricity as a motive power in the electric railways of the present day. The passage is from Nahum ii, 4, and reads as follows: "The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broadways: they shall seem like torches; they shall run like the lightnings."-Boston Transcript.
